

Applied Heritage Management Field School

Saturday 5th - Friday 17th September 2009

Gabbie Kylie Foundation

Applied Heritage Management Field Schools offer students opportunities to:

- Gain practical skills in archaeology, geography and cultural and natural resource management;
- Work with Traditional Owners and specialists to achieve on-ground conservation outcomes; and
- Explore a unique and spectacular part of Western Australia.

This 13-day field school will incorporate:

1. An archaeological survey from Woody Island (Recherche Archipelago) across surrounding islands and localised land care work.
2. Archaeological mapping, survey, and excavations at the complex heritage place – Tooklejenna (Israelite Bay, east of Esperance) - for developing a heritage protection plan.

The field school will be coordinated by Doc Reynolds (community liaison and logistics), David Guilfoyle (Archaeologist), Ross Anderson (Maritime Archaeologist) and Lindsay Collins (Geologist), with the support of specialists from the Department of Environment and Conservation and South Coast NRM Inc.

Cost is $1,500 per person; this includes accommodation, food and equipment for the field school. Participants must find their own way to and from Esperance, Western Australia.
